I'm writing to urge you to take more harsh action against Microsoft. The current recommendation of having microsoft supply thousands of computers to schools is actually rewarding Microsoft, rather than punishing them. One market which has been successfully addressed but a competitor to Microsoft is the education market. Now the recommendation to "punish" microsoft it to use the law to force them into one of the few markets where a competitor has managed to carve out a niche. Microsoft must be laughing all the way to the bank on that one. PLEASE, do not allow this company to become even more entrenched and allow it to further dictate the future of software development and even more importantly, the way people work and learn.
